Before the Court is Mi Familia Vota Education Fund, Rock the Vote, and League of Women Voters of Los Angeles’s (“Intervenors”) Motion to Intervene, filed on April 17, 2018, and California Common Cause’s (“CCC”) Motion to Intervene, filed on May 14, 2018. (Dkts. 31, 43). Having been briefed by all parties, this Court took the matters under submission on May 31, 2018.

Plaintiffs bring this action under Section 8 of the National Voter Registration Act of 1993 (“NVRA”). Defendants Dean Logan, Los Angeles County’s Registrar-Recorder/County Clerk, and Alex Padilla, California’s Secretary of State, act in their official capacities to represent the State of California. Plaintiffs allege that California has failed to follow the policies and practices required for maintaining voter registration rolls—written records of eligible, registered voters—by not removing ineligible voters from the rolls. As a result, Plaintiffs seek a court order requiring Defendants to develop and enforce a general program aimed at making reasonable efforts to remove ineligible voters from Los Angeles County’s registration rolls.

1 The Intervenor are three nonpartisan voter engagement organizations that target voters in 2 Los Angeles County and California to improve voter registration efforts. The Intervenor
3 concentrate on engaging members of the Latino community, mobilizing young voters, and 4 encouraging people of color and low-income Americans to participate in the voting process. CCC
5 is a nonprofit organization that aims to involve more citizens in the political process by assisting
6 and mobilizing voters. Intervenor and CCC move to intervene as defendants.

7 Applicants for intervention under Federal Rule 24(a)(2) must meet a four part test: “(1) the 8 motion must be timely; (2) the applicant must claim a ‘significantly protectable’ interest relating 9 to the property or transaction which is the subject of the action; (3) the applicant must be so 10 situated that the disposition of the action may as a practical matter impair or impede its ability to 11 protect that interest; and (4) the applicant’s interest must be inadequately represented by the 12 parties to the action.” Cal. ex rel. Lockyer v. United States, 450 F.3d 436, 440 (9th Cir. 2006).

13 In evaluating timeliness, courts consider “the state of the proceeding, prejudice to the other 14 parties, and the reason for and length of the delay.” Idaho Farm Bureau Fed’n v. Babbitt, 58 F.3d 15 1392, 1397 (9th Cir. 1995). Here, both the Intervenor and CCC filed their motions before any 16 hearings or rulings on substantive matters. Accordingly, this factor favors intervention. See id.

17 The requirement of a significantly protectable interest is generally satisfied when the 18 interest is protectable under some law and there is a relationship between the legally protected 19 interest and the claims at issue. Arakaki v. Cayetano, 324 F.3d 1078, 1084 (9th Cir. 2003). “An 20 applicant generally satisfies the ‘relationship’ requirement only if the resolution of the plaintiff’s
21 claims actually will affect the applicant.” Id. Here, Intervenor and CCC have a legally protected 22 interest to ensure that eligible voters maintain their right to vote and remain on the voter rolls.
23 However, there is no relationship between this interest and the claims at issue. Plaintiffs request 24 that Defendants reasonably attempt to remove ineligible voters from the voter rolls. Removing 25 ineligible voters from the voter rolls will not affect eligible voters’ rights. Accordingly, 26 Intervenor and CCC do not satisfy the second prong.

27 An applicant’s ability to protect his or her interest is impaired or impeded if, in the absence 28 of the applicant’s intervention, the applicant is “substantially affected in a practical sense by the

1 determination made in an action.” Sw. Ctr. for Biological Diversity v. Berg, 268 F.3d 810, 822
2 (9th Cir. 2001). Here, Intervenor and CCC are not substantially affected by the outcome of this 3 action as it pertains to only ineligible voters. The Intervenor and CCC speculate that eligible
4 voters risk wrongful removal from voter rolls. Should that occur, Intervenor and CCC may bring 5 a separate, private cause of action to vindicate these voters’ rights. Intervenor and CCC’s rights
6 will not be harmed if ineligible voters are removed from the voter rolls. Accordingly, Intervenor
7 and CCC do not satisfy the third prong.

8 The fourth part of the test assesses whether the existing parties adequately represent an 9 applicant’s interest. To determine the adequacy of representation, courts consider “(1) whether the 10 interest of a present party is such that it will undoubtedly make all of a proposed intervenor’s 11 arguments; (2) whether the present party is capable and willing to make such arguments; and (3)
12 whether a proposed intervenor would offer any necessary elements to the proceeding that other 13 parties would neglect.” Arakaki, 324 F.3d at 1086. “There is also an assumption of adequacy
14 when the government is acting on behalf of a constituency that it represents. In the absence of a 15 very compelling showing to the contrary, it will be presumed that a state adequately represents its 16 citizens when the applicant shares the same interest. Where parties share the same ultimate 17 objective, differences in litigation strategy do not normally justify intervention.” Id.

18 Here, Defendants are government officials charged with enforcing state election laws and 19 promoting voter registration to eligible voters. They share the same interest as Intervenor and 20 CCC in protecting eligible voters’ right to vote. Defendants have specifically stated that they 21 intend to represent and defend the voting interest that Intervenor and CCC claim in their motions.
22 That the Intervenor and CCC may approach litigation differently than Defendants does not justify 23 intervention. Because Intervenor and CCC have not made a compelling showing to the contrary, 24 the presumption that Defendants will adequately represent the citizens of California applies. As 25 Intervenor and CCC fail to meet all four prongs of the test for intervention as of right, their 26 motions to intervene are denied.

27 “Where a party may not intervene as a matter of right, the trial court may consider whether 28 permissive intervention is appropriate.” Spangler v. Pasadena City Bd. of Ed., 552 F.2d 1326,

Intervenors and CCC do not meet the threshold requirements because they do not share a common question of law or fact with the underlying action. Here, Plaintiffs are suing Defendants to enforce the NVRA and remove ineligible voters from the voter rolls. By contrast, Intervenors and CCC are concerned with eligible voters being wrongfully removed from the list. There is no reason that eligible voters would be removed from voter rolls if Plaintiffs are successful. In fact, it is purely speculative that eligible voters would be injured by ordering compliance with the NVRA. Additionally, the proposed intervenors are likely to delay the main action as the case would expand to six defendants. Accordingly, this Court denies permissive intervention for Intervenors and CCC.

17 IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that Mi Familia Vota Education Fund, Rock the Vote, and 18 League of Women Voters of Los Angeles' Motion to Intervene is DENIED. (Dkt. 31).

19 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that California Common Cause’s Motion to Intervene is 20 DENIED. (Dkt. 43).
